

Articles

Search

Home » Parties & Entertaining » Parties » Bridal Shower » How to Host a Book Shower for Brides

How to Host a Book Shower for Brides

Contributor

By an eHow Contributing Writer

Article Rating: ☆☆☆☆☆ (0 Ratings)

Host a Book Shower for Brides

Have a friend or loved one who is getting married? Want to give her a bridal shower but just don't seem to have the time? These steps show you how to throw a Tupperware book shower for the bride-to-be, for those whose schedules are just too busy to attend a regular bridal shower, without compromising on the quality of the gift.

Instructions

Difficulty: Moderately Easy

1. Attain a wish list from the bride-to-be of all Tupperware products she would like to have. Have her be as creative as she can when choosing her list. A guest list from the bride-to-be should be attained by the host or Tupperware consultant holding the book party. This list will determine how many Tupperware product books and order forms will be needed for each guest.
2. Pass out Tupperware product books and order forms to everyone on the guest list. Determine when the orders should be turned in and where the gifts will be sent. Sometimes, depending upon the time frame of the party, the bride-to-be will have the gifts sent directly to her, and other times, they're sent to the host. On occasion, the gifts will be sent to those on the guest list, and the guests will hand-deliver their gifts to the bride at the wedding, for a more personal touch.
3. Have each guest pick out the gift product that they want to purchase for the bride-to-be, and make sure the information is turned over to the host or Tupperware consultant. Keep an updated current distribution list to make sure there are no duplicate purchases. Avoid duplication as much as possible, because once purchased, the Tupperware products cannot be returned, unless the product is defective. Depending upon the product purchased, some duplications are doable. In other cases, the duplications end up as gifts for another occasion.
4. Collect all money due for each purchase. This must be done before products can be ordered. Turn in the orders and money to the Tupperware consultant. Your Tupperware consultant can have the entire order shipped to you and will contact you or the bride-to-be once the order has arrived for distribution. If the products are being sent directly to the bride-to-be or guests, then no other action is needed.
5. Remember to get a time frame from your Tupperware consultant once the order is placed as to when the Tupperware products should arrive. At this point, all the proper host and bride-to-be contact information should be verified and given to the Tupperware consultant. It is customary for the shipment to come in approximately 2 weeks after each order is placed.

Things You'll Need:

- Tupperware consultant
- Product books and order forms
- Bride-to-be's wish list

Tips & Warnings

- With most Tupperware book parties, the host of the party usually gets what is called a "thank you" gift by the Tupperware consultant for hosting the book party. The host also gets a percentage of "free Tupperware" of their choosing, based on the amount of the book order. The host can determine if she would like to forfeit the gifts and allow the bride-to-be to get the additional Tupperware. However, the bride-to-be may decide to choose to allow the host to keep the free products as

- a "thank you" for hosting the book party.

In cases where guests are from out of town and want to contribute to the book party, the host can conduct an online book party and have the gifts sent directly to the bride-to-be. The Tupperware consultant can assist the host in the setup of this

- online book party. See the website listed in Resources for additional details.

Resources

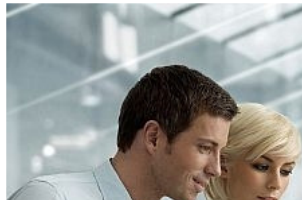

- Tupperware parties

Today's Top How To

How to Paint Ceramic Mugs

Featured How Tos

How to Improve Business Communication Skills

eHow of the Day

How to Childproof Your Home

eHow Quick Guide

Guide to Enjoying Spring Cleaning